Many parts of the following letters were read in 1844-45 and 1846 before the "Councils of the New Confederacy of the Iroquois," and to the establishment of that historical institution the research, by which the facts were accumulated, is chiefly to be attributed. The institution referred to is founded upon the ancient confederacy of the Five Nations, and its symbolic council fires are kindled upon the ancient territories of the Mohawks, the Onondagas, the Cayugas, and the Senecas. The design is "to gather the fragments of the history, the institutions, and the government of our Indian predecessors." Introduction. (4973)

NEW YORK NUMISMATIC SOCIETY. Constitution and by-laws. New York, 1864. 16mo.

January 23, 1864, eleven gentlemen met at the house of Robert Hewitt, Jr. 32 West 21st Street, New York, and organized a society to be known as "The New York Numismatic Society."

At a meeting of "The American Numismatic and Archæological Society," held February, 1864, in the Society Library, University Place, a committee (appointed at the meeting February 5 to confer with a committee of "The New York Numismatic Society") reported that no arrangement could be effected to unite the two societies. The opposition society had excellent leaders, and began its existence with a larger number of members, but it soon failed to hold meetings and went to pieces. Its minutes do not show any meetings held after April 16, 1864. July 31, 1866, "The New York Numismatic Society" was dissolved, and its effects turned over to "The American Numismatic and Archæological Society." Cf. History of The American Numismatic and Archæological Society, by William R. Weeks. pp. 8-9. (540)

"A reprint, with notes and translation, from a copy in the Lenox library, New York, of a tract published at Lyons in 1609 under title: Copie d'une lettre envoyée de la Nouvelle France, ou Canada, par le sieur de Côbes, gentilhomme poiteuin, à vn sien amy. En laquelle sont brièvement descrites les merueilles, excellences, & richesses du pays, ensemble la façon & mœurs de ceux qui l'habitent, la gloire des François, & l'esperance qu'il y a de rendre l'Amerique chrestienne. MDCIX.

The notes (pp. 18-30) are chiefly occupied with a discussion as to the location of the former settlement or harbor of Brest on the Labrador coast, province of Quebec, of which mention is made in the evidently fictitious narrative of Des Combes."
